The distant lion was heard approaching, and as he came nearer, the lioness roared louder, which seemed to agitate her husband, for he marched towards her as if to force her to be silent, and then sprang back to his old post, roaring denance at his distant rival. This continued for about an hour, when a black lion made his appearance on the plain. The lioness arose as if to go towards him; but her husband guessing her intention, bounded towards his rival. The two crouched and sprang upon each other, rolling on the grass in the embrace of death.

Their bones cracked, their flesh was torn, their cries of rage and agony rent the air, and all this time the lioness crouched and wagged her tail slowly in sign of satisfac-tion. When the combat ended, and both warriors were stretched on the plain, she arose, smelt them, satisfied herself that they were dead, and troted off quite regardless of the uncomplimentary epitaph.

This, Gerrard tells us, is an example of the conjugal fidelity of my lady; whereas the lion never quits his wife unless forced, and is quite a pattern of conjugal attentions .--Westminster Review.

The last illustration of this, that has fallen under our eyes, is the following story from the Pittsburg Journal:

Not long since, an old lady entered O'Reiler's office in this city, and said she had a message to send to Wheeling. In a few minutes her note was deposited in a dumb waiter, and ascended in a mysterious manner through the ceiling.

"Is that going straight to Wheeling?" inthe ceiling. "Yes ma'am," answered the clerk.

"I never was there," continued she, "but it hardly seems possible that their town lies in that direction. When will I get an an- that LOT OF LAND, in the city of Alexandria, swer, Mr. Telegraph?" "I can scarcely tell, ma'am; it may be two or three hours.'

The old lady went away, and returned in exactly two hours. Just as she entered the door, the dumb waiter came down through the ceiling. "There is your answer, ma'am," said the
